My Dearest Madam

Your Brother and self were much concerned at the intelligence you last gave us, of the truly uncomfortable situation you had so long been in, with the illness of your little family. I trust that this will find you all reinstated both in health and spirits. I forwarded your letter to my dear Taylor at sea, and in his reply he observed that he thought your spirits very low and was anxious that I should write you, and assure you of his affectionate solicitude for your comfort in every respect. He had expected in this a letter from Mr. Johnson, and will be glad

Yours affectionately
M. J. G.

hear from him, whenever it is convenient; since I wrote last I have been under great apprehensions that the Diamonds would have been taken to the West Indies, a place to be dreaded, I think; it has proved a grave to several thousand poor fellows ~~that~~ war, and many of our particular friends, however.

Thank God! Sir Robert Calder took them no farther than the Canaries, and then descried them for England; it happened,

The time I was was laid up in Childbirth with my little Girl; I am fearful she will be spoiled by her Father, by the bye; she is called Ann, Moravia the latter name in compliments to the Lady of Lord Hugh Seymour

Let me beg you will, my dear Madam, write soon, if there is any thing this part of
